Rector's Letter

The letter I wrote to the Farmers' Journal prompted more comment than any sermon I have ever preached! I wrote because I think there are serious Christian issues at stake; issues of what is right and what is just. Here is the text of the letter:

"On Monday, 13th August, the 'Irish Times, ran a column by Jim Clarken of Oxfam Ireland in which Mr Clarken commented, "Thankfully, in Ireland just 7 per cent of household incomes goes on the weekly shop". Nowhere in the column did he ask why the weekly shopping bill was so low.

Ministering in a farming community, where the past summer has created huge difficulties, it seemed to me extraordinary that anyone would write so unthinkingly, so I wrote to the 'Irish Times'

'Mr Clarken does not pause to ponder what this means for farmers in Ireland. That the cost of the weekly shopping is a small percentage of household incomes is a reflection of the fact that many Irish farmers are having to produce at below cost levels, prices being imposed upon many of them by companies with monopsony powers. At present, the only income for many farms is the EU Single Farm Payment.

Mr Clarken's wish for justice in the world would presumably include a desire that all people would receive a reasonable return for their labours - it is something necessary at home as well as overseas'.

The 'Irish Times' did not print the letter, nor did they print any other comment on the piece.

There seems a mindset in some quarters that the farming community is wealthy, (and can, presumably, afford such situations as that where people only spend 7% of their income on their weekly shopping). Any suggestion that this is not the case seems to be ignored. Minister Quinn's proposals that assets be included in assessments for third level education grants seemed just a part of a mindset which makes no attempt to understand the realities of rural Ireland".

Of course, writing letters to the Farmers' Journal is not enough to change things. Churches need to support farming communities in striving for two principles, fair pay and fair trade, both of which are grounded in Scripture and both of which are vital to the wellbeing of rural communities and rural churches.

The next Archbishop of Canterbury?

The 'Church of England Newspaper', the evangelical newspaper in the Church of England is tipping the Archbishop of Dublin as a possible candidate to be the next Archbishop of Canterbury, it comments:

"Archbishop Michael Jackson, 57. If the Crown Nomination Commission looks outside the Church of England they would be well advised to consider the Archbishop of Dublin. Michael Jackson has intellectual ability (two first class degrees from Trinity College, Dublin, and Cambridge and a PhD from Cambridge), a British passport (he comes from Northern Ireland) and has worked in the C of E as chaplain of Christ Church, Oxford. He has a good track record as a bishop and has been involved in Anglican Communion affairs. Although a liberal in theology he has shown a readiness to reconcile different sections of the church in the debate over sexuality".

Joint Meeting Of Roman Catholic And Church Of Ireland Bishops

A second meeting of representatives of the Irish Episcopal Conference and of the Archbishops and Bishops of the Church of Ireland took place in Dublin on 13 September last. In the context of most amicable and creative discussion, presentations were offered on:

- The ecumenical and evangelistic possibilities provided by the recent International Eucharistic Congress
- The perspectives of the churches as partners in Irish education on current issues in that area

These joint meetings are held in the spirit of the recommendation of the International Anglican Roman Catholic Commission for Unity and Mission that Roman Catholic and Anglican bishops in individual countries should meet from time to time for prayer, fellowship and discussion of common concerns.

Parish Notes

Harvest Festival at Lacca

Our Harvest Festival season continues with the service at Lacca Church on Sunday, 7th October at 4 pm. We shall welcome as our preacher Mr Mervyn Tomb from the Faith Mission. Mervyn spoke at the Mothering Sunday service at Lacca back in March when his acrostic on the word 'Mother' helped us think about women in the Bible and the ways in which they served God, and we look forward to his return. The harvest festival service at Lacca is always one of the best attended services of the year in our group of parishes and we look forward to a very large congregation this year.

Harvest Festival at Annatrim

The Harvest Festival service in Annatrim Church takes place on Sunday, 14th October at 11 am when we welcome the Revd Andrew McCroskery, vicar of Saint Bartholomew's Church in Dublin as our preacher. The service will include the sacrament of holy baptism, a very special way of giving thanks to God.

Smiles

The past summer saw the ordination of a string of new curates around the country. None of whom would be like any of the following :

A curate lost his voice at the local football match one Saturday and being due to preach the next morning, he thought he should call in and consult his vicar. So he rang the vicar-age bell and the door was answered by a very attractive teenage daughter.

"Is the vicar in?" the curate managed to whisper very quietly.

"No," she whispered back, thinking she had got the message. "Come on in!"

The curate went to the bank and asked for a statement of his account, adding: "We want to know how far afield we can go for our holiday."

Handing him his statement the cashier enquired very gently: "Have you got a field at the back of your garden, sir?"

A hospital patient's comment about the new curate: "He can stay longer in an hour than most people do in a week."

Looking back on those fading memories of summer:

When Columbus started out, he didn't know where he was going. When he got there, he didn't know where he was. When he got back, he didn't know where he had been. And he did it all on other people's money.

Can't help thinking that Columbus reminds me of some teenagers who go on family holidays. . .

An airliner flew into a violent thunderstorm and was soon bumping around in the sky. One very nervous lady happened to be sitting next to a clergyman and turned to him for comfort. "Can't you do something?" she demanded forcefully.

"I'm sorry ma'am," said the minister gently. "I'm in sales, not management."
